4th Annual SPEECH Regional Cancer Health Disparity Conference Thursday, May 12, 2022

Call for Abstracts

We are seeking abstracts that highlight and advance the field of cancer from all areas of research including basic, clinical and population-based. Students, Postdoctoral Fellows, and Junior Faculty are all encouraged to submit their work.

Research areas of priority include, but not limited to:

- Molecular cancer mechanisms
- Genetic approaches in cancer research
- Bioinformatics, biostatistical and epidemiological research
 - Racial and/or immigrant cancer health disparities
 - Early detection/screening tools and measures
 - Novel treatment programs and interventions
 - Disparities in cancer clinical trial participation
- Social determinants of health, behavioral and community-based participatory
 - Population-based cancer prevention programs

The synergistic Partnership for Enhancing Equity in Cancer Health (SPEECH) a comprehensive regional cancer health disparities partnership between Temple University/Fox Chase Cancer and Hunter College (TU/FCCC/HC) invites students, postdoctoral fellows and junior faculty to submit abstracts for poster presentation. The purpose of this conference is to promote the advancement of research in cancer health disparities and support the development of outstanding underrepresented minority (URM) and diverse students/trainees who are committed to careers in cancer research and to collaboratively engage the community in enhancing quality and feasibility of these efforts. The conference involves a session opening featuring a Keynote Speaker and SPEECH Investigators, poster and oral presentations, a mentor training workshop and networking with established investigators conducting cancer research and Program Directors from the Center to Reduce Cancer Health Disparities, NCI.
